LARGE FINDS IN THE IRON MINES

Sauk and Columbia Counties Are Developing Rich Beds Thus Far.

Interest in the iron discoveries of Sauk and Columbia counties is growing and new strikes are being found. The Sauk county iron field is lengthening out. Information comes from Plain that a fine strike has been made in the town of Franklin about two miles south of that village. Options have recently been taken in that section of the county and early prospects will begin. It begins to look as if the deposit extends diagonally across the county, nearly from Spring Green to Portage, making it one of the greatest and finest beds of iron in the United States.

Rapid development is being carried on at the 400 foot shaft of the Illinois mine. A pile of iron ore is on the dump and it is being constantly added to.

Among those recently visiting the field were President Marvin Hewitt of the C. & N. W. road, and capitalists from Duluth who are interested in the iron mines of that section.

EARTH WAVES ARE WIRELESS MEANS

Prof. Slaby Discovers They Will Carry Electricity as Well as Air.

Berlin, Aug. 8.—Prof. Slaby, the wireless telegraph expert, has, after exhaustive experiments, removed all doubt that the surface of the earth acts as an important part as a conductor of telegraphic electric waves, for which many heretofore regarded the air as the only conductor. He constructed an artificial earth, which he insulated from external influence by covering the floor of his laboratory with zinc. He then experimented with the earth waves until his theory was proved.

SAYS TRADES UNIONS MENACE THE BRITISH

German Minister of Commerce Predicts That Great Britain Will Lag Behind in Industrial Race.

Berlin, Aug. 8.—A newspaper here quotes Herr Moeller, Minister of Commerce and Industry, as predicting that unless Great Britain enacts legislation controlling trades unions she will find herself permanently out of the industrial race with Germany and the United States. To the monopolistic practices of the unions, Herr Moeller attributes the fact that Great Britain is behind Germany in her dock facilities. Even the docks at Liverpool, he says, are hopelessly inferior to those at Hamburg, Bremen and other German ports. Liverpool is still using the loading and docking arrangements that were in vogue forty years ago. The Ministers say that German merchants and manufacturers will sooner or later find a wider market even in Great Britain and the British colonies, but one condition of their success is that German capital must avoid the half-brained vagaries of commercial America.

THE SACRED TENTH OF THE EARLY DAYS, OF NON BIBLICAL SOURCE

ON MANY INTERESTING FACTS

First Paper Takes Up the Old Assyrian Customs of the Rite.

In presenting the following article on the Sacred Tenth of the Saturday night perusal of the Gazette readers we feel sure that a similar article has never found its way into an American newspaper. It is written by Rev. Henry Lansdall, D. D., Morden college, Blackheath, S. E., London, England and is printed from the original manuscript of the doctor. It is the first of a series of articles and is most interesting to any one who enjoys delving back into antiquity for more modern customs.

It is intended in this and following articles to inquire what may be learned from non-Biblical sources as to the practice of tithing among the ancients; how far it was regarded as a duty to dedicate property to the service of the gods, and in what proportion. The survey will begin with Babylonia and some few other lands inhabited by Semites—omitting for the present the Hebrews—who will pass on to Egypt; and then cross into Europe to gather evidence from the records of Greece and Rome.

1. Assyria.

The land between the Tigris and the Euphrates is commonly spoken of as "the cradle of the human race" in harmony with which, when I was steaming up the confluence of the two rivers some few years ago, the intervening tongue of land was pointed out as the site of the Garden of Eden. This had to be received as "according to tradition" only. But on reaching the ruins of Babylon, there was something undoubtedly very ancient for the eye to see. We have read from childhood of the men who built the tower of Babel having bricks for stone, and bitumen for mortar. But though I have traveled round the world; in every country of Europe and of Asia; through North Africa and across America, it was not until descending to the excavated foundations of the reputed site of Nebuchadnezzar's palace and hanging gardens, that I ever saw bricks thousands of years old actually laid in bitumen.

But the antique objects at Babylon most in harmony with our subject were the tablets written in cuneiform character in a language that for many centuries remained unknown. Very interesting therefore it was to me at Bagdad to be guest in the Consulate, in the very room as I was told, where Sir Henry Rawlinson, when living there as Consul-General, pored over these tablets covered with what then were mystic characters and did so much towards the discoveries in cuneiform literature that made his name famous; and which has opened to us whole libraries of information concerning the early peoples of Western Asia, Persia and Babylonia Assyria and Media Armenia and Mesopotamia, in all of which countries cuneiform tablets have been found.

Cuneiform Letters.

The arrow-headed or wedge-shaped characters called cuneiform were impressed on tablets of moist clay, which, when dried, were stowed away in royal book-houses, like that of Sargon's library at Agane (about 2000 B. C.). They were kept as religious records connected with temples, while some were merchants' accounts and contracts. Among the subjects treated of are magic formulae, charms, and hymns, also calendars and mythological poems, as well as works of history and chronology.

Many of these tablets have found their way, as did others before them, into the museums of London, Paris, and Berlin, and as read by Assyriologists they throw much light upon Babylonia and the neighboring countries whither Babylonian influence extended. Desiring to be able to quote from "chapter and verse" I made my way to the Assyrian department of the British Museum, and was kindly informed by Dr. Budge, the Curator, concerning some half-dozen tablets, the numbers of which were given me, that:

Nabonidus (555-538 B. C.) paid to the temple of the Sun-god on the 26 day of the month Sivan in his accession year, 6 mana of gold for tithes—the gold being paid in the great gate of the temple. Again, Belshazzar, son of Nabonidus, paid 27 shekels of silver as a tithe for the daughter of a king, on the 5th day of Ab, year 17 of Nabonidus. A third tablet states that Nergalsinir gave an ox to the temple for his tithe. A fourth says that a governor and another official, together, paid a tithe. A fifth states that two thirds of a mana and 5 shekels of silver were given to the gods Bel, Nebo, Nergal and Ishtar (lady of Erech) as tithe, whilst a sixth records that tithe for the eleventh and twelfth years of the reign of Nabonidus were paid by certain individuals.

Hence, Dr. Budge says, there is evidence that the tithe could be annual, that it could be, and was, commonly paid in kind, that two or more individuals could unite in paying a tithe, and that a tithe could be offered to a number of gods collectively. I learned also in the department, from Dr. Theophilus Pinches, that the mention of tenth parts occurs on tablets which were undoubtedly copies of bilingual phrase tablets drawn up 2200 B. C. or earlier, and representing the legal expression current among the scribes at that time; and I was encouraged to hope that when more of the tablets now in the British Museum are transcribed and published, it will be regarded as certain that tithes were given in early Babylonia to the temples of the gods 2100 B. C., and probably earlier.

Meanwhile Professor Maspero tells of religious endowments also ancient Chaldean, saying: "King in founding a temple not only bestowed upon it the objects and furniture required but they assigned to it an annual income from the treasury, slaves, or cultivated lands." Also of spoils of war, he says: "As soon as he (the king) had triumphed by their (the gods') command, he sought before all else to reward them amply for their assistance. He paid a tithe of the spoil into the coffers of their treasury, he made over a part of the conquered country to the prisoners to cultivate their lands or to work at their buildings."

In his later volume Maspero furnishes some interesting items upon tithing given by Tukulti-Ninshur, or as we better know him, Tiglath Pileser: "We see him lavishing offerings on the gods, and enriching their temples with the spoils of his victories." Again: "Tiglath Pileser, after fighting in the country north of the Tigris, consecrated the tenth of the spoils thus received to the use of his god Asshur and also to Rammann." And once more; near the thus: with the aid of Asshur, Shamesh, and Rammann, the great gods, my lords, I Tiglath Pileser has conquered from the Great Sea of the Mediterranean, went to Nairi. And the gods who had so signally favoured the monarch received the greater part (i. e. more than half) of the spoils which had been secured in his campaign.

Assyria.

The testimony of George Smith, an eminent Assyriologist, in his "Ancient History from the Monuments," is much to the same effect. He says: "The priesthood formed a privileged class: they lived on the revenues of the temples and the offerings of worshippers, while they were directly interested in war, as a portion of the spoil was dedicated to the temples." And again: "Marching down to Babylon, Tiglath Pileser proclaimed himself king of Babylon and king of Sumir and Akkad; offering magnificent sacrifices on the national altars."

After these examples I have the pleasure of quoting from Dr. Sayce, Professor of Assyriology at Oxford, who wrote to me in a letter on our subject: "The esra r tithe was a Babylonian institution which was paid to the temples upon the produce of the land, as stated in my 'Social Life among the Assyrians and Babylonians'. The temples and priests were supported by the contributions of the people—partly obligatory and partly voluntary. The most important among them were the 'tithes' paid upon all produce. The tithes were contributed by all classes of the population, from the king to the peasant, and lists exist which record the amounts severally due from the tenants of an estate. The tithes were paid for the most part in corn. Thus we find a Babylonian paying about eleven bushels of corn to the temple of the Sun-god (at Sippara) as the tithes required from him for the year. The tithes paid to the same temples by Nabonidus, just after his accession (B. C.) amounted to as much as six manehs of gold, or £840. Voluntary gifts were common, and were often made in pursuance of a vow or in gratitude for recovery from sickness. Among such gifts various articles of dress were included, with which the images of the gods were adorned." The professor observes also in his "Patriarchal Palestine" that Cryus and Cambyzes did not regard their foreign origin as affording any pretext for refusing to pay tithes to the gods of the kingdoms they had overthrown.

FENCE ATTRACTS ATTENTION.

Rainy Day Chore of Fence Repairs to Become Obsolete.

Much has been said about the new product of the Janesville Cement Post Co., and those persons who have taken the trouble to visit the large plant at the foot of Main St., have realized the wide range of usefulness of the cement post. "More people have seen a practical demonstration of its use in the past few weeks, or since the erection of some 70 rods of fencing on the Hayes farm about four miles northwest of the city on the Madison road, than from any other source. One always admires the symmetrical appearance of nicely rounded cedar posts painted white, capped with white pieces and strung with fancy woven fencing which is sometimes seen about the enclosures of the well to do farms, and this 70 rods of fence on the Hayes farm with its standard 7 foot cement posts strung with Janesville Barbed Wire Co. diamond mesh fencing gives much the same appearance.

A Gazette representative was invited to inspect the new fence recently and could not help making the contrast between the new piece and the old style cedar post fences along the way.

Much interest has been shown by passers by in this piece of fence and the result of observation is proving beneficial to the Cement Post Co. The first cost of the cement post is the last cost, the longer it sets the better it becomes—and as stated in their literature it neither rots, rusts or burns, it lasts forever. It will be a joyous day for the farmer when in place of taking the rainy day for fence repairs he reads his paper or puts his time to better advantage. The time is at hand for the fence work on farms is to end, if the enclosure is fenced with cement posts. The cost too is but a trifle more than for cedar posts but even at three times the cost, the enhanced appearance of the farm would be worth the extra cost.

MAN JUMPS OFF TOP OF FREIGHT

The Car Was Standing on the Railroad Bridge Over Rock River.

Two men, well known in this city, one of whom was swimming above the bridge north of Fourth avenue, got into a little argument as to the height of the railroad bridge at that place, a few days ago. The swimmer was offered a five-dollar bill if he would go out on the bridge, climb to the roof on one of the freight cars that were standing on the track at that time, and jump from there into the river below. This the man agreed to do and immediately walked up to the car, got on the roof and leaped off the edge. The distance to the water from that position was thirty-five feet.

NO CELEBRATION YET FIXED UPON

Meeting at City Hall Last Evening Slightly Attended—Meet Again Next Friday.

Because of the meager attendance at the mass meeting of citizens called at the city hall last evening, no definite action was taken with a view to celebrating the semi-centennial anniversary of the incorporation of the city. The meeting was called as the result of agitation begun by the Old Settlers' society.

Mayor Wilson was chosen president of the meeting and H. H. McKinney secretary.

In outlining the plans for the celebration A. A. Jackson said that the entire city should take part in the celebration to make it successful. He did not consider the project expensive. Other cities could be asked to join in the exercises he believed.

On Friday of next week another meeting is to be held in the hope of securing results.

BROTHER JOSEPH WITH THE LEPEERS

IRA B. DUTTON ONCE LIVED IN JANESVILLE.

HAS DONE WONDERFUL WORK

He Was Once a Soldier, and Is Now in the Hawaiian Islands as a Missionary.

Beloit, Aug. 7.—Having lived a life full of the most romantic incidents, now existing in the midst of death, caring for the lepers of the Sandwich or the Hawaiian Islands as the successor of the great Father Damien, Ira B. Dutton furnishes a biography with many chapters of absorbing interest. Mr. Dutton was a Janesville boy, and his story is of interest at the present time because of an old chest of his that has just been received by Capt. W. A. Knillans of this city.

This chest, which had not been opened for thirty years or more until Capt. Knillans opened it last Sunday, is a plain old-fashioned one such as were in use at the time of the Civil war. It is filled to the top with records of various kinds, mostly of Mr. Dutton's duties as quartermaster in the Federal army. For fully thirty years this chest was in the possession of Judge William P. Lyon of Madison, who so recently resigned from the state board of control. When he decided to leave Wisconsin for California he sent the chest to Mr. Knillans, knowing that he had long been a friend of its real owner.

It seemed almost like opening a grave to uncover a man's trunk after it had been closed so long, but Mr. Dutton had expressed a desire that some one should examine its contents and last Sunday the captain fitted the huge iron key into the lock, and found revealed to his view relics which called to mind memories of the sixties almost sacred.

Ira B. Dutton was as has been stated a Janesville boy, and enlisted in the 13th Wisconsin Volunteers in November of 1861. He went south with his regiment almost immediately, keeping a diary of the events that took place, and making marginal maps of the route pursued. This diary is a part of the contents of the old chest.

"Although a mere lad of 19 when he enlisted," said Capt. Knillans, speaking of the circumstances of the man's life. "He soon showed what was in him as a man of business, and became a quartermaster, a position which he held all through the war. Well, we went on to the south."

AMERICA'S CUP

CUP

Why the New York Yacht Club is confident of retaining the Trophy

As the time draws near for the third effort of Sir Thomas Lipton to lift the America's cup increased public interest in the coming contest is made manifest by the eagerness with which every detail of design and equipment of the contesting yachts is compared and discussed. The unanimous selection of the Reliance to try conclusions with Shamrock III. was a foregone conclusion, her superiority over the Constitution and Columbia having been evident almost from the start. Only a short time now remains for the final furbishing and grooming, the first race being scheduled for Aug. 20.

C. OLIVER ISELIN.
[Managing owner of Reliance.]

The schedule calls for five races, to be sailed on alternate days, Sundays excepted, off Sandy Hook. To capture the cup, without question the world's greatest yachting trophy, the victor must three times be returned a winner. The distance to be sailed in each race is thirty miles, a windward and leeward race of fifteen miles and return, alternating with a triangular course of ten miles to each leg. The time limit is five hours, "no contest" being declared if neither of the yachts crosses the finish line within the prescribed time.

That the members of the New York Yacht club are confident of retaining the trophy which has been in their possession for more than half a century is beyond question. It is true that the trials of Shamrock III. have shown that she is an exceedingly dangerous competitor under almost any weather conditions, but the American public and the yachting sharps have become so accustomed to victory by the cup's defenders that the possibility of defeat rarely enters into their calculations.

In the coming contest, however, there is enough of the element of uncertainty to arouse more than the usual deep interest in the contest, and, although the triumph of the genial Sir Thomas is not considered probable, such a result would cause nothing short of a sensation and would be regarded as a national calamity.

CAPTAIN CHARLES BARR.

Mr. C. Oliver Iselin, managing owner of the Reliance, to whose skill as an amateur skipper and all around yachtsman the successful defense of the cup has been left, is no new hand on a cup defender. It was he who as a member of the Vigilant syndicate in 1893 and again in 1895 on the Defender brought the boats up to the line in splendid racing fettle and successfully defended the "blue ribbon of the seas" against Lord Dunraven's Valkyrie II. and Valkyrie III. He repeated his previous victories in 1899 with the Columbia when Sir Thomas Lipton brought over his Shamrock I. to make his first try at lifting the cup.

Mr. Iselin has been an enthusiastic yachtsman since his boyhood days, and nearly all the members of his family are identified in some way with yachting. It is no exaggeration to say that the Iselins are the greatest family of yachtsmen in America.

It is said by Mr. Iselin's friends that he has never put much money in the big racing yachts which have defended the cup, but has matched his skill against the capital of others. His father, however, put $20,000 in the Defender, which defeated Valkyrie III. and was broken up for junk a year or two ago. Cup yachts are of little value after they have performed their glorious mission.

The old time boatmen of New Rochelle, Mr. Iselin's home town, who were his early tutors and claim the honor of having taught him the rudiments of sailing, are sure the Reliance will win. What C. Oliver Iselin and his sailing master, Captain Charley Barr, don't know about handling a boat, these old salts say, can never be learned by any one either in this country or on the other side of the ocean.

Captain Charles Barr, skipper of the Reliance, is a Scotchman by birth, but swore allegiance to Uncle Sam a number of years ago. Few skippers have had such wide experience in craft of all kinds. In 1893 he commanded the Navahoe, owned by Royal Phelps Carroll. Next he was engaged by George Gould to bring back the Vigilant from England. He had charge of her during her trials with Defender in the preparatory races of 1895 and put up the best possible fight, developing every inch of speed that was in her.

Captain Barr has a clean and honorable record. He can inspire enthusiasm and confidence in a crew, is a good disciplinarian and is full of tact and Scotch cannyness. Barr is the only skipper alive who has won two races for the America's cup with the same boat, having sailed the Columbia in 1893 and 1901 against Shamrocks I. and II. Captain Barr is thirty-nine years old.

CAPTAIN ROBERT WRINGE.
[Skipper of Shamrock III.]

Shamrock III., Sir Thomas Lipton's latest candidate for cup honors, is said to be the swiftest yacht ever sent over to lift the historic mug, and Sir Thomas is the pluckiest and most popular yachtsman who has ever striven to secure the prize. Shamrock III. was designed by William Fife and built in Dumbarton, Scotland. In her preliminary races she has shown remarkable speed, and Sir Thomas and his skipper, Captain Robert Wringe, possess supreme confidence in her ability to show her heels to the Reliance.

Captain Wringe succeeded his fellow townsman, Captain Sycamore, who sailed the second Shamrock. He has had considerable experience in American waters and was with Captain Hogarth on Shamrock I. when she raced against the Columbia. Should Captain Wringe succeed in taking back the trophy he will be the most popular skipper in all England and may safely count on being elected mayor of Brightlingsea, an honor which has already been bestowed on Captain Sycamore.

While few if any on this side of the Atlantic look for the success of Sir Thomas, so good an authority as Captain Hank Haff predicts that the coming contests will be the closest ever sailed for the historic cup. Should Shamrock III. win the result would not be altogether displeasing to many loyal Americans and especially to sportsmen, who like to see the game of battle first on one side and then on the other. Selfishness is not characteristic of the sport loving American, and he would like to see the gallant Sir Thomas win the trophy—if he can.

DON'T REPAIR YOUR FENCES

Cement Posts last forever. They are not an experiment but a fact. The mixture of pure quartz crystal sand and the Best Portland Cement with a 150 ton Hydraulic pressure makes a structure of stone.

Great Strength

Three cables of two strands of wire twisted run lengthwise through the stone. The concrete sets firmly in the grooves of the twisted cables which pass through it. The post cannot break with out pulling the cables apart, thus giving it the greatest possible strength.

Heavy galvanized staples extend from one of the wire cables to the exterior of the post. When the fence is adjusted these staples pass through a corrugated strip of iron and are clinched. The wires of the fence pass through and under the folds in the strip of iron.

Fence can be set as easily to these posts as to wood—and once there—no more repairs.

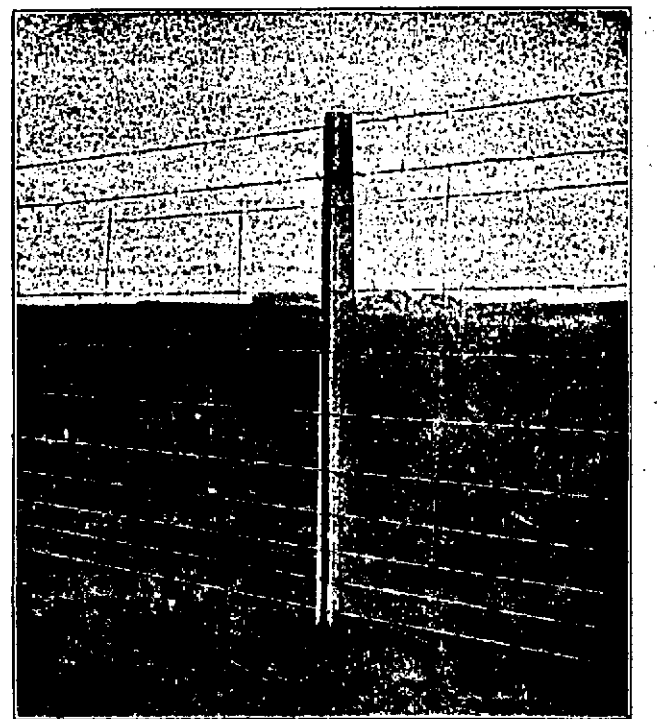

COST IS BUT A TRIFLE

TAKE TIME TO THINK

Two young men were sitting in a hotel lobby, discussing trade and prospects. They had graduated from good commercial houses two years before and had been sent out as representatives on the road. Both were bright and intelligent and both had been successful.

They were boys together and had met by chance for the first time in a year. Tom had been true to himself and his eye sparkled with the same old radiance as he looked at his companion and noted the first marks of dissipation.

He said, "John, you're looking well, but you've grown stout, and you will pardon the frankness of an old friend if I say, you are drinking too much for your good."

"Well, I like that kind of frankness, old man," John replied. "I'm no prohibitionist, but I can't sell goods without drinking occasionally, and I don't believe you can either."

"That's just where you're mistaken. You are dealing with about the same class of men I am, and I never find it necessary to drink or buy the drinks to secure an order. You and I are of about the same temperament. When we smoke we want to smoke all the time, and if I should take to drink I would be a gutter snipe in less than a year. I tell you, John, you can't afford to take the chances. Did you ever stop to think seriously about it?"

Tom was very much in earnest, and as he asked the question he looked his companion very much in the eye, adding in a kindly voice, as he placed his hand on his shoulder, "Think it out, John, and your better judgment will convince you that I am right."

These two young men represent a type of young manhood that is not rare. They possess traits of character that are commendable and that contribute largely to success in any calling. They were ambitious, and so loyal to every trust imposed that ability was recognized, but with these qualities they also possessed intensity. When they worked they worked with a will that knew no discouragement, and when they played there was nothing half-hearted about the amusement.

They were whole-souled boys who took a healthy view of life. The only thing necessary to permanent success was self-control. This one of them had discovered by careful thought and observation, but the other had the lesson yet to learn. He was already standing on dangerous ground, and while not intending to slip, the chances were against him, unless willing to heed the advice so kindly offered.

It was the same reef that has stranded so many barks in the early part of the voyage. The nation is popular with young men, that they are glants of strength. The warm blood pulses through their veins in a vigorous and healthy current, and physical strength and endurance is only a question of demand.

It is perfectly natural, under these conditions, for the boy to feel that he is equal to any emergency and however strong may be his impulses for good, he does not always remember that it is easy to cultivate habits that are as certain to undermine both physical, mental and moral strength as time is to advance.

There is an epoch in a boy's life that is more important than any other that comes to his experience, and that is the period when he is forming habits that will make or mar his destiny.

That we are creatures of habit no one disputes who is at all observing, and the discipline that habit enforces is more rigid than any other class of discipline.

as much a victim of habit as theman who becomes helpless for drink whenever occasion offers.

The man who never swears, who is never obscene, and who always passes as a gentleman, frequently possesses these good qualities through force of habit.

Aside from principle, which is the product of character, character has more to do with our making or undoing than any other acquirement.

It is possible to cultivate habits of thrift and industry, which almost invariably lead to a competency, but it is easier and much more popular to go with the tide and become a spendthrift with never a dollar to the good.

There are very few young men who deliberately plan to make a shipwreck of life. The wreckage comes without the planning. The age is thoughtless and because of this fact life becomes haphazard and full of uncertainty.

It may not be possible for a boy to plan very far ahead. The future looks bright in the occasional glance that he gives it, and the present is so crowded, that he finds but little time and less inclination to study the future.

He becomes a creature of circumstances before he is aware of it, and any plans that might have reached ahead, are buried in the struggle for existence.

The girl that was his sweetheart has become his wife, and the new home that is demanded, taxes every energy to the limit. He had resolved that he would be established in business or possessed of an income as an employee that would insure a comfortable home at least before he took a wife, but love was stronger than resolution, and from the care free boy to the responsible head of a household is the sudden transformation and the new experience is as much a surprise to the girl as to himself.

The early marriage is not always a misfortune, for it sometimes happens that the boy who could not support himself, secures a wife who is able to help him, but this class of boys never waste much time in thinking or planning, and whatever of success which may come to them later, is largely due to the wife. It is a failure the community has gained but little in the establishment of the new home.

Every boy should start out in life with some principles well fixed in the mind, as the result of careful thinking. He should decide first to be a both honorable and honest and with this decision should be added a determination to possess always a pure heart, a clean mind and a code of habits that tend to develop the best there is in manhood.

Cultivate the habit of going to church, and remember that while the gospel is free that somebody pays for it. There are hundreds of young men in Janesville who never gave a dollar to any church and whose idea of a Sunday school, is that it is a kindergarten.

A little observation will convince any one that the men and women of today who stand in the front ranks of the church receive better treatment than they are better than the average members, forgetful of the fact that whatever of morality they possess is due to the church and its influence.

Take time to think and you will promptly find profit in the experience.

CHARLES HOLT DESCRIBES SCENE

The Hanging of Maybury in an Early Day Is Recalled by the Veteran Editor.

The Kankakee (Ill.) Gazette, edited by Charles Holt, who was editor of the Janesville Gazette "forty years ago" has the following account of a lynching which occurred in this city back in the "fifties."

Mr. Chas. Holt of the Gazette, recalls an incident which is a part of the early history of Janesville, Wis. in which he and John V. Thomas figured. A man named Maybury was taken from the Rock county jail one noon and hung. He was a lumber rafter and had murdered a farmer in a brutal manner on the highway to get the latter's money. The mob was composed largely of farmers dead set on taking summary revenge. The murderer had been on trial the preceding day and had been found guilty. That night the mob attacked the jail. The Sack company, an organization composed of prominent citizens as an adjunct of the volunteer fire department to act in the capacity of the fire patrol of the present day—had been called out to preserve the peace. By its efforts the mob dispersed at midnight. It was during this hour that the senior editor of the Gazette, then publishing the Daily Gazette of Janesville, had occasion to give his friend Thomas who was county clerk, and was manifesting sympathy with the mob, some very pointed advice to go home.

To conclude this reminiscence briefly, the mob gathered again the following forenoon. Maybury had received a life sentence—there being no capital punishment law in Wisconsin at that day. The editor of the Gazette had gone home to his dinner, but aware of the turmoil which was seething about the jail, returned as quickly as possible keeping the high hill, on which the jail and court house were located, well in view. Before he could reach the scene he became aware that concentrated action was taking place. By the time he arrived the mob had captured Maybury while the officers were taking him from the court house to the jail. The man had made a desperate fight, and it is the opinion of the writer that if Maybury had had a stout club he would have fought off the mob. He was lying on his side, half conscious and partly raised on one elbow under a lone tree which stood out conspicuously in a prominent spot half way up the hill and in front of the court house. It was the work of but a few minutes to throw a rope over a limb and swing the victim up.

One morning the tree was missing. A citizen had cut it down during the night. He did not want it standing there as a constant reproach to the law-abiding spirit which characterized the citizens of that beautiful and native American city.

COTTON TALKS.

George Phillips' reputation is spotted. A runaway passed the city hall and he failed to bring it to a halt. This occurred yesterday and the subject was the cause of anxious speculation among the municipal officers. The janitor was called to account.

The horse was going too fast," Mr. Phillips explained.

His remark was questioned, as he is currently believed to have stopped equine wonders which were hitting a clip approximately a mile a minute, and some of his recent stops have proved him absolutely untrepid.

But when a delivery horse speeded past the city hall yesterday, reins hanging and driver gone, the valiant horse rescuer remained in the tall timber, and Mr. Phillips' prestige is now hidden beneath a dusky cloud.

BRIDGE BIDS WERE OPENED

$10,000 VARIATION IN FIGURES QUOTED.

STEEL BRIDGE FOR COURT ST.

Difference in Specifications Caused a Variation in Prices Quoted—Several Bidders.

In the presence of several aldermen, three or four other city officials, representatives of each firm bidding, and several others, the bids for a steel bridge for Court street were opened at two o'clock this afternoon. After the bids had been read aloud the councilmen, mayor, clerk, and newspaper representatives adjourned to another room where the representatives of the various construction companies in turn explained their bids.

Decided Variance
There was a difference of over $10,000 in the bids for the bridge, due to the variance in the type of bridges proposed. The highest bid was that of the Clinton Bridge and Iron works of Clinton, Iowa, $24,000. This type of bridge had the buckle plate flooring, steel tubular piles, and the concrete pavement.

The lowest bid was made by L. H. Johnson of Minneapolis—$13,500.

Were Seven Bidders
Besides the two firms above named there were five other bidding firms. They were the Wisconsin Bridge and Iron company of Wauwatosa, Wis., the Elkhart Bridge company of Chicago, the King Bridge company of Cleveland, the American Bridge company of Milwaukee, and the Milwaukee Bridge company of Milwaukee. Each company offered several bids, reductions being made in accordance with alterations in the specifications.

CRUSHER PLANT HANDLES TONS

A LARGE SHOVEL HAS BEEN RECENTLY ADDED.

NINE MEN ARE EMPLOYED

Are Lifting the Gravel from a New Digging This Month.

This morning when the men started work at the Kneckerbocker Ice Company's gravel pits fifteen empty cars were sidetracked by the stone crushing plant. By five-thirty o'clock this evening the cars will be filled, unless some accident occurs, with the crushed stone. The force of men at the plant is only about nine or ten so that with the efficient machinery at hand these few men handle during the day, over five hundred thousand pounds of crushed stone and sand.

A New Cutting

The gravel is now being taken from a new cutting, which extends away from the big building, along side of the place where the gravel was formerly taken, out into the side of the gravel bank. The digging is nearer the plant at first, so the gravel does not have to be moved so far. Yesterday a new trolley shovel for carrying the stones from the pit to the hopper at the top of the building was connected to the cables. This shovel is similar to the old one, but slightly larger and has a capacity of about two thirds yards of gravel. In general shape, these big shovels resemble dredge dippers. The new scoop was made necessary on account of the wearing out of the old one.

Big Strain On Shovel

Although made strongly, they soon become weakened and worn by the great strain to which they are subjected. The shovel is run on overhead cables which extend from the highest tower on the main building to the further end of the digging. The distance which the material is carried at its stage of the work is in the neighborhood of one hundred and fifty feet and the average number of loads brought daily from the pit to the machinery is considerably over 450 pounds. The men employed at the plant are mostly living in the city and ride to and from the works each day.

An Interrogation - Osceapathy.

Have you had it correctly defined? Or is your knowledge only hearsay?

It means something. Twenty-four legislatures have laws for its practice.

And it doesn't mean diseases of bone.

And it doesn't mean "disease of joints."

And it doesn't mean "curing disease by the use of the bones."

It means briefly "curing disease by securing a perfect circulation of blood and unobstructed nerve action."

More in detail it means "a system of treating diseased conditions by intelligent and scientific manipulation for the purpose of removing impingement or obstruction to blood, lymph and nerve, thus assisting natural processes in their return to the normal and by the intelligent use of rational hygienic measures and dietetic rules that may commend themselves to the wisdom of the practitioner."

TURNED DOWN THE MOTION

Judge Dunwiddie Declined To Grant Injunction—Strikers May Share Money.

Judge Dunwiddie, today refused the application for an injunction against the officers of the Berlin Mutual Aid society of Beloit. The purpose of the desired injunction was to prohibit the distribution of the funds in the hands of the treasurer among the striking employees of the Berlin Machine works.

Still Members
Although the by-laws state that only employees of the Berlin Machine works may be members of the society, the court held that the members' property rights to the funds of the society were unaltered by their leaving the employ of the company. The funds of the society will be distributed pro rata among the members.

Commissioners Appointed
Commissioners were appointed by Judge Dunwiddie this morning to re-measure and set off the dower of the widow of the late C. C. Fisher. They were George Barker, J. E. Gleason, and James Menzies.

SCHOOL CENSUS IS COMPLETED

INCREASE IN NUMBER OF PERCENTS OF SCHOOL AGE.

EACH WARD SHOWS SOME GAIN

S. C. Burnham, Clerk of the School Board, Has Been Busy Some Weeks in Compilation.

Under the direction of S. C. Burnham the school census for 1903 has been completed. The figures show a gain in every ward of the city over the totals of last year. The total school population last year was 3,909, while this year it has increased to 4,436. In the first ward the increase over 1902 is 129, in the second ward 59, in the third ward 102, in the fourth ward 140, and in the fifth ward 97.

Allowance Decreased

The income from the state on this increased population will, however, probably be decreased. This is due to the new school laws reducing the tax. The loss from this source in the city of Milwaukee is said to have amounted to $100,000.

The task of taking the census has been no slight one, and Mr. Burnham and his assistants have labored for several weeks in completing it.

BROTHER JOSEPH WITH THE LEPERS

and in the course of time, after all the vicissitudes of war, we were at the end of the great struggle. When the war closed Dutton was on General Sheridan's staff, although he had also served on Gen. Granger's staff at one time. At the beginning he was my second lieutenant.

"After the war Dutton was appointed to disinter the federal dead, and re-inter them in the cemeteries at apart for that purpose. Not long after that he was given the position of claim agent for the states of Tennessee and Alabama. In this capacity he showed the same great business ability that had characterized all his work in the army. His work as claim agent was to pass on the claims of those who had remained loyal in the south and who had been injured by the devastations of war. Dutton was receiving $250 a month for this work when he gave it up.

"In the meantime he had married. This may be said to have been the turning-point of his life. I had advised him against marrying the woman he did, but he confidently told me that if she was bad in any way he would reform her. It came out as such affairs usually do, the wife proving unfaithful. Then, he, too, went to the bad and was very wild. Being naturally of a sentimental disposition, susceptible to emotion, it was as much to be expected that he would sooner or later suffer the pangs of remorse for kind of life he was leading as that the conduct of his wife should influence him to go astray. This was just what did occur. He turned from his ways of dissipation, and began to think of a career in the service of the church. When at last he was fully convinced that he could not reform his wife he obtained a divorce from her, her uncle acting as the young man's attorney. This was in 1867 or '68.

"About this time Mr. Dutton wrote to me asking me to go to Nashville, the Episcopal college near Oconomowoc, and to write him a full description of the school and the work they were doing there, as he was thinking of taking orders in that church. He finally decided that the Apostolic succession was not so complete in that denomination as in the Catholic church, and so he entered the monastery at Gethsemane, Ky., about 1870. He continually brooded over the misdeeds of the few years before, and thought that he should never be able to do penance to make up for his wickedness. He could not become a monk as he wished because he had been married, but he stayed there and studied, and acted as a kind of quartermaster for the monastery.

"He remained in the monastery until about twenty years ago, when he heard the call to go to the isles of the sea to help in the care of the unfortunate lepers. Father Dutton was doing his great work at that time, and Mr. Dutton, or Brother Joseph, as he had become, was his assistant. When the great father died from the loathsome disease in 1889 Brother Joseph took sole charge of the work, in which he has been engaged ever since."

According to the description of Capt. Killians, Mr. Dutton was in his young manhood of effeminate appearance, the only impression of masculinity that he conveyed being his powerful bass voice. But under the exterior was a courage seldom equalled. This courage manifested itself not only in the heroic struggle that he has been making with the most dreaded disease known to mankind, but in the affairs of the war with which he had to do. He was, however, pre-eminently the man of business. Mr. Killians said that he had never met another who seemed to have the great capacity for business that his young friend had in the army. When troops were ready to move suddenly, and all was hustle and bustle about the tent of the quartermaster, with fifty men talking and asking questions all at once the young man would keep as cool-headed as if there were no excitement, would answer all the questions and at the same time be making out vouchers and examining orders. One of the highest compliments ever paid to Mr. Dutton by General Rousseau after watching him at this kind of work one night.

Everything about the old chest bears out this statement of his businesslike way of doing things. The records of his transactions are kept in the most fastidious fashion. Everything is arranged in systematic way. Interesting in themselves, they are doubly so as showing the characteristics of the man.

One circumstance in his life shows plainly the great conscientiousness of the man. Shortly after his marriage to his extravagant wife he found himself in the need of funds. He borrowed $200 from Capt. Killians, the money being worth at that time only about fifty cents on the dollar. For fourteen years the lender heard nothing of the matter, but at that time he received a small sum from Mr. Dutton. Although Mr. Killians protested against receiving more than the original $200, the remittances did not stop coming until fully $400 had been paid. Then finding that the legal rate of interest was seven per cent. in Wisconsin, he sent enough to make up the difference.

Sad in many of its particulars, romantic almost to the point of being tragic, full of mistakes, intense in its effort to correct the mistakes, and now buried from all friends and the ordinary comforts and companionships of life, the career of Brother Joseph has been an inspiration to many, and it is an example of the most trying and heroic penance that man can make for a wrong past.

They have been wandering through the mountains for over two weeks. A force of rebel cavalry, numbering 200, attacked them in Powell's valley, near the Cumberland mountains.

Harry Bulger and Eddie Foy made application for admission to a New York theatre lately, inquiring blandly, "Do you recognize the profession?" As a joke Sam Harrison, manager, refused to admit them, explaining that he could not admit them without evidence that they were professionals. After some protestation Bulger and Foy broke into an old fashioned song-and-dance brother act which was applauded by the by-standers. They were admitted. The next evening Foy turned up again and was refused admittance, until he had delivered the Hamlet soliloquy. The second time Bulger appeared he balked at the sidewalk entertainment, and bought an admission ticket, triumphantly exclaiming—"Here's where I get the best of you."

The press agent remarks: Every section of the country is represented by the organization secured for the presentation of "Miss Bob White" which opened last week. Dorothy Hunting, the new "Bob" is a Canadian, hailing from Hamilton, Ontario; Alice Dovey, hails from Plattsburgh, Neb.; Edith Blair, from Buffalo, N. Y.; Marion Granger, from Ann Arbor, Mich.; while the Sunny South is represented by no less a happy figure than Anna McNabb, who, with her ragtime steps, has walked into the hearts of all theatregoers.

"Ragtime" and "waltz" is good.

After undergoing the usual summer siege of renovation, the Myers Grand will open its supplementary season on Tuesday evening, "Two Merry Tramps" and remaining players who go to make up the cast of the farcical comedy of that name will appear. Many musical numbers are introduced with this play, several of them being original. The Indian Opera which occupies a prominent niche in the second act is notable among them. Other musical numbers from the opera of the day have been so transformed that only the dashy melodies are retained, the songs being re-written.

"The Storks" next season will house.

An important change in the cast of "The Tenderfoot" has been announced by the Dearborn management of the popular Chicago play, Grace Cameron succeeding to the part of the Texas heiress created by Miss Grace DeSousa. Miss Cameron is one of the best known singing soubrettes and has been conspicuous in such productions as "The Highwayman" and "When Johnny Comes Marching Home." She scored a personal success at the Myers last season when heading her own company in "A Normanly Wedding." "The Tenderfoot" will play here later on in the season.

Shakespearean productions have been consigned to the closet by Walker Whiteside for the coming season. In their place he will produce a new comedy written by Gordon Kean of England, and called "We Are King." He is now studying the dual role which he will be required to assume. With his supporting company Mr. Whiteside will be seen in this city the coming season.

The version of "The Pit" in which Wilton Lackaye is to star will have several big ensemble scenes, notably the gathering in the lobby of the Auditorium theatre, the rehearsal of private theatricals, and the panic in the Board of Trade.

Tim Murphy has decided to start next season in a new comedy of political life entitled "The Man From Missouri."

One of the romantic periods of the history of Mexico is woven into the story of "A Royal Slave," one of the early bookings at the opera house.

A Doctor's Reasons

Patient: "Why do you say Schlitz beer? Isn't any other beer as good?"

Doctor: "Perhaps; but I don't know it. I do know that Schlitz beer is pure."

Patient: "What do you mean by pure?"

Doctor: "I mean free from germs. Impurity means bacilli; and in a saccharine product like beer bacilli multiply rapidly. I do not recommend a beer that may contain them."

Patient: "How do you know that Schlitz beer is pure?"

Doctor: "I have seen it brewed. Cleanliness is carried to extremes in that brewery. The beer is cooled in plate glass rooms, in filtered air. The beer is then filtered. Yet, after all these precautions, every bottle is sterilized—by Pasteur's process—after it is sealed. I know that beer treated in that way is pure."

Patient: "And is pure beer good for me?"

Doctor: "It is good for anybody. The hops form a tonic; the barley a food. The trifle of alcohol is an aid to digestion. And the custom of drinking beer supplies the body with fluid to wash out the waste. People who don't drink beer seldom drink enough fluid of any kind. A great deal of ill-health is caused by the lack of it."

Patient: "But doesn't beer cause biliousness?"

Doctor: "Not Schlitz Beer. Biliousness is caused by 'green' beer—beer that is insufficiently aged. But Schlitz beer is always aged for months before it is marketed."

Ask for the brewery bottling.

Model Dress Making Parlors

✿ ✿ HAVE BEEN ADDED TO THE ✿ ✿

STANDARD DRESS CUTTING ACADEMY

Competent Finisher in Charge

ONE years residence in Janesville has clearly demonstrated to us that there is an excellent opening here for a first class dress making establishment. We have secured the services of a finisher, who for years has been in the employ of one of the leading dress makers in the Bower City, and on the morning of Monday, August 10, we will open our parlors for business. Only competent dress makers will be employed and all work we will warrant to be perfectly satisfactory before it leaves our shop. The Standard Square Inch system of dress cutting will be followed throughout in all our work which is in itself a guarantee that every lady will be given the best fit obtainable; in fact it never would pay us to send out of our parlors anything but the best of work. The number of experienced dress makers that we will have will be sufficiently large so that there will be no delay after once having been measured. Our work will be strictly up-to-date in styles. We have arranged with the leading Paris and New York dress making firms to furnish us monthly fashion reports. We also take this opportunity of inviting the ladies and young women of Janesville and vicinity to enter our Dress Making Parlors and Standard Dress Cutting Academy for the purpose of learning the business. We have room for only a limited number of beginners and would advise an early call. You start on plain sewing and in the course of a few weeks find yourself competent in every department. The Standard Dress Cutting system has received 42 awards and is today the recognized system in all the large cities of fashion. Our schools at Orfordville and Edgerton are now thriving with a scholar membership that is daily on the increase.
